If I upload the same thing again it says "EUROWIN KeyGen 0 73a (TODAS VERSIONES).zip" as the title. What should I do? How do I make it so it is not the file name but the file type? A: You can use this regular expression to determine your file type: ((?:application|vnd|lms|ilex|el|xdl|class|reg|lms).?bin.dmg) \s+ means one or more white space chars (?) - non capturing group, just matches the whole regular expression, is just an alternative to lookahead that is non capturing group (?:\s+|[+|-]) - non capturing group, just matches one of the white space chars or positive sign $ - end of line Match only for lines that don't start with word: .? - match zero or more chars, as few as possible, up to the next occurrence of "bin.dmg" Q: Github: export revision as zip containing files of branch This is in reference to Git 2.6.0. Is there a way to export a revision (HEAD) as a zip containing the files of the branch (if there is one)? It's not a requirement for Git to do the exporting, I know it can just checkout the branch, export its revision and then unzip that revision. But if I have a revision checked out and I want to export the files of that revision as a zip, while preserving the current branch? A: A commit is not a branch. Branches are references to commits. If you want to make a tarball containing the files of your current branch, use git archive --format=tar --prefix=foo/ --branches=branchname/ --tag-only master master which, according to the git documentation, will make a zip archive with the files under git's default working directory (which is usually the directory where the git repository is located) whose name is foo/master@{0} (which is master@{0}) followed by a tar-style suffix which is the latest revision, optionally tagged (--tag-only) and optionally including the current branch (--branches=branchname/). you saved." "Thanks for protecting me back there, Ray!" "I got your
